

I cannot tell you how much I abhor the fact the yet another entity is trying to dictate what I can or cannot read, watch, or listen to. I subscribe to XM radio, paying the monthly subscription fee, so I have the freedom to listen to what I want, when I want, without having to suffer through loud and obnoxious commercials. I understand that local radio wants to protect their "turf", however, healthy competition has always driven the marketplace towards more choices and better service. I'm don't see the difference here. I respectfully urge the FCC to reject and deny any petition that inhibits the consumer from choice.
